Langbaine appears to have possessed an edition of this play printed in 4to in 1594. "This play says he, was first printed 4to Lond. 1594, and acted by the Earls of Darby, Pembroke and Sussex, their servants." Doubtless he had it before him. The description of the impression by him made, is different from the enumeration of the edition of 1600 given at the head of A2. Hall.

In the year 1800, a copy of this play, printed in 1600, was discovered in the Duke of Bridgewater's Library at Ashridge, which has been since removed to London. I have collated the present copy with it, and the variations are set down. No other copy of the edition of 1600, except this of the D. of B's, is known to exist; nor was it ever seen by any of the editors of Shakspeare before 1800.

The title of the edition of 1600, which is in 4to, is as follows:
